

Cash Is Not King Anymore For HR Rewards

OFFER YOUR EMPLOYEES AN EXPERIENCE

Although recent economic years have been tumultuous, non-cash reward and recognition tools remain an important component of the HR toolbox. According to a 2014 study of HR managers by the Incentive Research Foundation, HR owners of non-cash reward and recognition programs were very positive about the role non-cash awards play in elevating engagement within their organizations.

More than 65% reported that in their experience, gift cards for merchandise were either extremely effective or effective at increasing engagement within their organizations. In addition, 74% of respondents noted that their non-cash reward and recognition programs have the support of their corporate management.
